Commissioner Taylor Hears Final Arguments in Fowler, Schulteis and Martin Case.

EXTRADITION SOUGHT ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE

Government Upholds Course, While Defense Makes Attack Upon Indictments.

Final arguments for and against the missioner Anson S. Taylor yesterday afternoon at the third session of the hearing regarding the extradition to the southern district of New York of former Representative H. Robert Fowler, Herman Schulteis and Henry B. Martin of this city. The three men named, together with five others, are under indictment by the grand jury of New York for conspiracy to restrain ants were heard by United States Com-New York for conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman antitrust law by preventing the manufacture and shipment of munitions of war to foreign nations. Commissioner Taylor announced that he would notify defendants and their counsel and the Department of Justice representative when he was ready to hand down his

Plead to that."

Mr. Davis summed up by saying that an indictment which shuts the mouth of the indicted from showing the probability of his innocence is no indictment at all, and that the one under discussion so hampers the accused because, through the absence of any specified names, times or places, they would be unable to put on the stand witnesses in their favor.

Defends Indictment.

Attorney Archer for the plaintiffs defended the indictment, declaring that the portion thereof reading "and to restrain and prevent the production or manufacture of munitions of war for the sole purpose of hindering and preventing their shipment or transportation in foreign trade and commerce constitutes a valid and sufficient charge of an offense for which the defendants should be extradited.

The arguments of the defense, if carried to their logical conclusion.

Sid Mr. Archer, "would imply a demand to be charged with the destruction of a popgun, whereas what they really did was to try to interfere with the, whole great business of the manufacture and transportation of munitions in the United States."

Mr. Davis further charged that a paper demanding extradition must bear on its face evidence of an effort in good faith to charge an offense and that in the document in question this evidence is lacking. Although accused of conspiring in southern New York, there is no mention in the indictment of any individual, firm, time or place, and the grand jurors admit on their oaths that they are unable to name such. Nor can they rightfully so swear unless after making an honest effort to find out, said Mr. Davis, who likened the indictment to "throwing the dictionary at a man's head and saying 'Plead to that.'"

Mr. Davis summed up by saying that an indictment which is the proper in the child and to make reports to his child and to ma diate success. It was then taken to

Former Representative Fowler reliterated his charge that bribery was at the bottom of the bringing of the identification of the properly indictment and regretted that this phase of the question was not discussable at this sort of hearing. "Not only bribery, but burglary and larceny," he added. "The indictment was presented two weeks after the man responsible for it had been impeaced by Congress."

The bill increases to three the number of appointments to the academy allotted annually to each senator, representative and delegate in Congress, instead of two, and it leaves the present allowance of ten appointments at large by the President and fifteen appointments from the enlisted men of the navy. It is estimated that this plan, when enacted, will make an increase of 500 appointments authorized to be made annually, of whom only about 300 are expected to qualify, and entails an extra expense of $180,000 annually.
